THE BUSINESS IN ONE PARAGRAPH

A grocery counter is all about speed and volume: hundreds of small bills a day, a mix of packed items and loose goods sold by weight, thin margins and perishable stock. The cashier cannot wait — a scan must add the item instantly, and the owner needs to know exactly what is expiring or running out.

A DAY IN YOUR SHOP · THE WORKFLOW WE BUILD AROUND

- 1 Receive goods against purchase; enter batch, MRP and expiry
- 2 Weigh and label loose items (rice, dal, vegetables)
- 3 Cashier scans barcodes or weighs on the connected scale
- 4 Bill held when a customer steps away; next customer served
- 5 Cash, UPI and card payment split; monthly khata for regulars
- 6 Low-stock alerts, supplier orders and end-of-day cash closing

WHERE GENERIC SOFTWARE FAILS YOU

Queues cost sales

Every extra second per bill adds up across hundreds of customers a day.

Loose items and expiry

Goods sold by weight and batches nearing expiry are tracked by hand.

Credit goes untracked

Monthly khata and pending amounts live in notebooks and memory.

Our approach: we map this workflow first, then design every screen, rule and report around it — nothing extra, nothing missing.
